Biography

Thomas Lamb Eliot (1841-1936) was born in St. Louis, Missouri, from New England stock as his father, the Reverend William Greenleaf Eliot, left the Northeast to settle in the frontier town of St. Louis in 1834 to found the first Unitarian church west of the Mississippi and to help found Washington University. T.L. Eliot, after attending Washington University and a divinity course at Harvard, in his turn traveled to Oregon in 1867 to found the first Unitarian church in the Northwest. He also was civic-minded and worked in education and jail reform, founded the Art Association and the Humane Society, helped develop the public library, worked for temperance and women's suffrage, and played a large part in the formation and final founding of Reed College in 1911, serving as a Trustee and major advisor until his retirement in 1925.

The correspondence fills 33 manuscript boxes (16 linear feet) with over 2,000 letters written by Eliot and over 1,000 letters penned by his wife. Business interests, Unitarian Church sermons and activities, family life, the founding of Reed College, and the Eliot's wide travels are all covered during the period of the 1860s through the 1930s, while the diaries of W. G. Eliot, Jr. are dated through the 1950s. A few letters from individual correspondents are of particular interest and include missives from Dorothea Dix, Charles Eliot while President of Harvard, T. S. Eliot (a cousin), Edward Everett Hale, General William T. Sherman, William Howard Taft, Kate Douglas Wiggin, Frances Willard, Thomas W. Higginson, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Julia Ward Howe, Francis Peabody, and most of the prominent founders and movers in the Portland area. The correspondence also contains a letter from John Quincy Adams dated 1838 and perhaps sent to Eliot's father.

Other portions of the collection represent T. L. Eliot's very active life. There are 16 manuscript boxes (8 linear feet) of sermons, 7 boxes of articles, and 6 boxes of diaries which are rich with all manner of detailed observations. His son's papers are less well-organized but include 6 linear feet of diaries and 9 cartons (over 13 linear feet) of correspondence, sermons, and other papers.

The T. L. Eliot Collection has been one of the most consulted of collections in the Reed Archives. Researchers have included at least two Harvard scholars: Thomas Brown of North House consulted the correspondence for his biography of Dorothea Dix while James Reed, a Visiting Scholar at Harvard, researched the intellectual history of the Pacific Northwest focusing on religion and literature. Other scholars have found considerable material for work on the Women's Suffrage Movement (T. L. Eliot was a friend of Elizabeth Cady Stanton but only copies of correspondence are held), the Unitarian Church in the West, Oregon mountaineering in which T. L. Eliot had an interest, a biography of Louis F. Henderson, a botanist friend of Eliot, Henrietta Eliot and the women of the Eliot family as representative of the domestic ideal of Unitarian church teachings, and the Eliot family history.

The Harvard and New England connections underpin the T.L. Eliot Collection. Harvard presented their honorary degree of S.T.D. to T. L. Eliot in 1889. T. L. Eliot was a cousin of Charles Eliot, President of Harvard from 1869-1909, and visited Boston several times.

Scope and Contents

The Archives of the Special Collections of Reed College Library house the Thomas Lamb Eliot Papers, which also include the papers of his son, William Greenleaf Eliot, Jr. The collection contains extensive materials concerning the Unitarian Church in Portland, Oregon, and both Eliot father's and son's ministries there, such as sermons and church documents. In-depth materials on the T.L. Eliot household comprising account books and diaries are present as well as voluminous correspondence between T.L. Eliot and his wife, Henrietta Robins Mack Eliot, other family members and friends. A strong connection is seen between the T. L. Eliot's and the Boston area, since Charles Eliot, President of Harvard, was a relation and trips to Boston were not uncommon.
